AS well as freezing Council Tax for five years, the Council has been able to invest in vital services like the Median Road Resource Centre. It provides residential care for 37 people at any one time, who need support after coming out of hospital, before returning to their own home.

The Lower Clapton centre has just been rated 'excellent' for the third time in a row by a Government watchdog Hackney Today went to talk to staff and residents about the services it provides.

FIFTH TAX FREEZE

By James Willsher

THE Council is set to become the first in the country ever to freeze its share of the Council Tax for five years running.

Hackney's Mayor Jules Pipe has proposed the freeze to his Cabinet as part of his plans for next year's budget. This follows the release of Government figures showing that Hackney has saved more money to plough back into services than any other London council.

Mayor Pipe told Hackney Today: "In these difficult economic times, every penny counts, which is why we are doing our bit by continuing to keep council tax at 2005 levels.

"Through making efficiency savings, we have managed to freeze the tax for a record fifth year, whilst investing more in the areas most important to our residents, such as cleaning streets more regularly; providing more activities for young people; and expanding essential services such as homecare to meet rising demand.

"We have shown it is possible to improve the quality of life for local people without raising Council Tax"

The Mayor continued: "Over the last few years we have shown it is possible to improve the quality of life for local people by improving services such as recycling, parks, libraries and leisure centres, without raising Council Tax.

"This financial discipline will mean we are in a stronger position than many other councils to deal with the tighter times ahead for national public spending."

The Council will vote on the Mayor's budget proposals in March next year. The proposed freeze affects the Council's portion of the Council Tax bill, the remainder of which is set by the Mayor of London.

Message from the Mayor

A record tax freeze without service cuts

NOW more than ever, it is the responsibility of the Council to get the best value for money it can from every penny it spends. That is why, as I reported in the last edition of Hackney Today, over the past five years we have saved over £40million to plough back into frontline services through running the Council more efficiently – more than any other borough in London.

The Council has saved over £40million over five years

At a meeting on 26 October, the Cabinet agreed to support my proposals to freeze our share of the Council Tax again; making Hackney the only council in the country to be keeping Council Tax frozen for five years running. These are difficult economic times for people everywhere, and it is right that the Council does what it can to help Hackney residents through the global recession.

In addition to keeping Council Tax at 2005 levels, my budget proposals include extra investment in social care for vulnerable adults and young people with learning disabilities; money to support the running costs of the new and expanded libraries opening in Dalston and Clapton; our new youth centres; and funding for the expanded recycling service. Of course, the Council will continue to maintain its core services, such as cleaning the streets, collecting waste, running parks, libraries and leisure centres and keeping the borough safe.

I am making these proposals earlier than in previous years as we want to maximise the opportunity to consult with residents about the Council's budget and how Hackney's money is spent. There will be more information about how you can participate in this consultation in a future edition of Hackney Today, and on the Council's website: www.hackney.gov.uk

Murray Grove: The next step

By Emma Britton

THE Council has moved a step closer to reopening Murray Grove Post Office. Following approval from Cabinet on 26 October, the Council will now go out to tender to try to find a partner to run the Post Office in Hoxton. A public consultation over the summer with residents and businesses showed that there was strong support to reopen the Post Office, which closed in June 2008 as part of the Post Office Network Change Programme. Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "Residents and businesses, supported by their local councillors, have told us that they would like to see Murray Grove Post Office reopened, and that its closure has affected the way they go about daily tasks such as using postal services, paying rent and bills, and receiving benefits and pensions.

Residents and businesses will need to support the Post Office by using it regularly

"We're now looking for a partner to run the Post Office. If this is successful, residents and businesses will need to support the Post Office by using it regularly to ensure the Council can keep it open for them in the long-term." If a partner is found to run the Post Office, it will be initially funded for up to five years, with a review after two years, to assess levels of use and financial viability. It is hoped the Post Office could reopen in early summer 2010.

KEY FACT
88 per cent of residents who responded to the consultation said they would use Murray Grove if it was reopened

Care hat-trick

Pembe Garip, John George and Sammy Ludwin are among those taking part in an exercise class (above); and Leila Myers and George Paterson (below)

By
James Willsher

THE Council's Median Road Resource Centre has received three out of a possible three stars after being inspected in August and September by the Care Quality Commission (CQC).

The CQC report singles out for praise the centre's rehabilitation service, as well as physiotherapy and use of an on-site gym. Staff are noted as treating residents with respect.

Karen Odle, who runs physiotherapy classes three times a week, was delighted. She said "We are all very proud of the recognition we have received. This is the only rehab centre in Hackney and our beds are generally all full. It's just rewarding to be appreciated."

During a morning exercise class a group of 10 residents were gently encouraged to stretch and flex their muscles according to their levels of fitness and ability. Leila Myers, 78, spent six weeks in Homerton Hospital following a stroke. Along with the other residents, she will be spending up to six weeks at the centre learning how to use one of her arms again, as well as regaining her eyesight fully. "I like to lend a hand if I can," she told us, while helping a fellow resident to sit down.

Joseph Mcilroy, 85, who left Northern Ireland in the 1950s, lives in Manor House. He said: "They take good care of you here and the Council has arranged some home help for when I return home."

Pembe Garip is originally from Turkey, and while she spoke English, an assistant at the class was on hand to translate if necessary. "I feel like a baby again," she smiled, as she lifted up her arms over her head during one of the routines.

I'm delighted to be here, it's put a smile on my face. It's been amazing

George Paterson has lost much of his memory since being hit by a car, but views his circumstances with optimism. "I'm delighted to be here," he said. "It's put a smile on my face – it's really been amazing."

Staff also work to promote residents' independence, encouraging solo trips to swimming sessions at London Fields Lido, and also offer support to manage personal finances.

Median Road Resource Centre was also rated as 'excellent' in inspections carried out in 2006 and 2008.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Shop with trusted traders

A NEW 'Buy with Confidence' scheme aims to give trusted traders a seal of approval to advise customers that they are buying from a reliable firm.

The Council is encouraging traders to sign up to the scheme, which will place a quality mark on the business's website and inform potential customers that they are a Hackney approved company.

The scheme was launched in response to demands from consumers for lists of high-quality local traders. In 2008, the National Consumer Council – the information and advice service for consumers, now called Consumer Direct – received an overwhelming 1,800 complaints from Hackney residents regarding problems with home improvements and rogue traders. The second highest rated problem was used cars, receiving 45 complaints.

Businesses and consumers wanting more information on the Buy with Confidence scheme should call: 0207 8356 4929; or visit www.hackney.gov.uk/buywithconfidence

Robbers caught by CCTV

TWO violent robbers who had been separately targeting lone women in the borough have been caught, thanks to the work of Hackney retailers.

Paul Hydes, 35, and Selmani Muboyayi, 29, were caught on CCTV, but the video did not get a clear shot of their faces. Hackney shopkeepers were asked to support the investigation by allowing Police to access their private camera footage, giving the officers the opportunity to identify and catch the perpetrators and press charges. Hydes and Muboyayi both received indeterminate public protection sentences last month.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "All those who have been robbed by these violent men have shown enormous bravery in speaking out. Thanks to them as well as to the work of the CCTV and Police teams working together, these criminals have been caught and have been given sentences that reflect the severity of their crimes."

Youth career opportunities

EVER thought about a career in the public sector? Hackney young people aged 16-24 can get work experience, training and a salary of more than £15k by becoming a Council apprentice in the business administration department.

Trainees are also given support in-house as well as a relevant study programme with a college or training organisation. Amrita Kaur, a current apprentice on the scheme, said: "Along with working, I am also able to gain a professionally recognised qualification. With these two qualities, I will be recognised by employers."

The closing date for completed applications to the scheme is 9 November 2009.

Now in its fourth year, The Hackney Youth Sports Awards lauds the cream of young sportspeople in the borough who have participated in various events during the past year, including the London Youth Games. It also recognises those making a difference to development.

Michelle Weltman, one of the UK's chief coaches for

“It takes dedication and commitment to achieve in the sporting field”

elite sportspeople with disabilities, was singled out for her contribution to swimming at the event on 12 October. The trainer received the Mayor's Award for Services to Sport in Hackney. She has coached swimming Paralympians Elaine Barrett and Dervis Konuralp and continues to work at grassroots level with up-and-coming talent.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, presented the awards, along with Dervis, fellow Paralympian Jody Cundy and Cllr Guy Nicholson. Mayor Pipe said: “I was pleased to be able to present these awards to such deserving recipients and was impressed by the range and level of achievement on display. It takes a lot of commitment and dedication to achieve in any sport and congratulations are also due to the parents, coaches, trainers, schools and supporters throughout Hackney who enable these individuals to succeed.”

During the event, grants were given out to recipients of Hackney's Youth Sports Fund, which provides financial support to young athletes and organisations towards the cost of facilities, equipment and training. The Council set up the fund after wresting £300,000 from Nike for using the borough's logo on a range of sportswear, without permission.

opened up to provide information, while showing the range of organisations that can help people who have mental health difficulties in Hackney. Dance and drama workshops, a photographic exhibition and complementary therapy sessions were on offer. Visitors were also able to contribute to the 'Tree of Life' – an art piece for individuals to write about what they regarded as critical to living a fulfilling life. The event was a collaboration between local NHS mental health services, Hackney Community Services and local voluntary sector organisations. According to the Mental Health Foundation, one-in-four UK adults experience at least one diagnosable mental health problem in any one year. ### Sparkle safely

AS fireworks light up the skies in Hackney, the Council and the police are running a joint operation to keep festivities in the borough safe for all.

Together they are urging residents to report illegal and anti-social behaviour that can spoil the fun for people at this time of year.

Annually, around Bonfire Night, there is a recorded increase in anti-social behaviour, with more incidents of dangerous fireworks usage, criminal damage and thefts. People in the borough are being asked to stay alert for offences while they enjoy celebrations.

The Police and the Council's Trading Standards Unit will be conducting mystery shopper operations to crack down on illegal sales, as well as visiting shops to inform retailers of the regulations surrounding storage and sale of fireworks. For info on fireworks safety, call: 020 8356 4911; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/eh-fireworks-safety-426.htm

Domestic violence help

TIMES and venues for the Council's domestic violence and hate crime drop-in surgeries are changing.

Instead of taking place at Neighbourhood Housing Offices, the sessions will now happen every Monday at an office near the Town Hall. People who need specialist advocacy, advice or counselling in complete confidence should phone ahead to let the advisors know they are coming.

The exact location will be kept anonymous for safety reasons.

The service is run by case workers fluent in English, Bengali and Turkish. However, interpreters for other languages can be found if an appointment is booked in advance. For more information call free: 0800 056 0905.

Baby on board

A SINGLE decker bus turned into an unlikely ward when a baby was born during rush hour last month.

Emiloju Fatimah Lawal went into labour but never made it to Homerton Hospital as her new son Olacidebe Dennis Agbwla arrived on the 394 bus.

The driver and a passenger were on hand to provide assistance and an ambulance arrived shortly afterwards to find mother and baby doing well.

Having been advised the 394 bus is constructed by Alexander Dennis, Emiloju felt Dennis would make an apt middle name. "I really want to show my appreciation and think it is quite nice for him to have a link with where he was born," she added.

DEMOLITION work has begun on two Hackney housing estates undergoing a £150 million regeneration programme.

The Haggerston West & Kingsland estates are set to be knocked down and rebuilt, providing 761 new flats and houses as well as a community centre, nursery, shops, and play facilities.

Residents, Council officers, local ward councillor Jonathan McShane and Cllr Karen Alcock, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, all gathered on 13 October at Bryant Court, Kingsland Estate.

Cllr Alcock and L&Q chief executive, David Montague at Bryant Court

Debra Herring, Chair of the resident-led Estate Development Management Committee, said: "We have been waiting for this for a long time and for the residents it's a step in the right direction, showing that things are happening."

The Haggerston West and Kingsland estates were formally transferred to London and Quadrant Housing Trust (L&Q) last year from Hackney Homes, after a vote from tenants and residents in 2007. L&Q are leading the redevelopment of the estates, which will take place in two phases during the next few years.

Cllr Alcock said: "The Council has pledged its commitment to providing 21st century housing for residents, and the start of demolition at Haggerston West and Kingsland is a milestone. It's not just about value for money and masterplanning, but about new homes, schools, improved quality of life, and local people taking pride in their new community.

"Redeveloping the Haggerston West and Kingsland Estates is a mammoth undertaking, but by listening to what residents want and with support from our local authority partners, the area has a bright and exciting future."

And a workshop day organised by Institutions of Civil and Mechanical Engineering has shown just how far.

'Set for Sport: London 1908, 1948, 2012' looked at the impact engineering has had since the first London Olympics more than 100 years ago and how it has revolutionised both performance and equipment.

A day of exhibitions, problem-solving workshops, presentations and debates in the Town Hall guided 60 Hackney schoolchildren to consider sport through the lens of engineering innovation, while allowing the pupils to work directly with engineers.

Among the events on 30 September was an exercise to design the perfect competitive shoe for the 1908 Olympic sport tug-of-war.

Focus was also placed on the wider use of engineering in wider society, such as in recycling and energy usage, and organisers hoped to encourage ethical questions behind innovation in sport as well as encourage interest in engineering careers.

Youth plans for Olympic Park

YOUNG people from Hackney were among the first to tour the new office of the Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC).

The Legacy Now Youth Panel is a group of 25 teenagers from the five 2012 host boroughs with an interest in planning and design. The scheme aims to offer them a chance to contribute to the future of the Olympic Park.

The panel have spent a year working with masterplanners, as well as encouraging other young people to get involved.

Panel member Andre Dias, 18, who is a Hackney 2012 Youth Ambassador, said: "Being in the Legacy Now Youth Panel has been great. It has boosted my confidence and helped me work in groups and with people I didn't know before."

Their work has culminated in a manifesto, which was presented to OPLC Chief Executive, Andrew Altman. The company is responsible for the development of the Olympic Park site over a 25 year period after the 2012 Games have finished.

The Panel members will now help choose and mentor a new panel, to be appointed in December.

Disability Open Days return to Hackney in 2010 – with the first event scheduled for 21 March at Clissold Leisure Centre

But grassroots sports benefiting local people are as key to the spirit of the Games as those vying for medals.

With this in mind, an open day of sporting fun for people of all ages with disabilities took place at the Britannia Leisure Centre, N1.

More than 150 disabled people, along with family members, carers and friends, enjoyed the day of free activities on 25 October designed to encourage the take-up of new sports. The open day was the third and final scheduled at Hackney leisure centres this year.

Adults and young people sampled athletics, wheelchair basketball, badminton, football and a variety of Paralympic sports.

The event followed The Learning Trust's Hackney Schools Championships – also in October – which aimed to widen inclusive sports for disabled and non-disabled pupils in schools.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "Disability Open Days are a fantastic way for residents to enjoy trying different sports and making new friends. As Hackney is a host borough for the 2012 Games, the Council hopes

A large area of new parklands is being created for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. After the Games the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) will transform these parklands, ready for handover to the Olympic Park Legacy Company.

In December 2009 the ODA will be submitting a planning application to ensure the parklands are transformed into a public park following the Games.

THE things I've done as a lad out of Hackney because of my charitable work are phenomenal. I've been everywhere and met everyone. I've had dinner at Buckingham Palace, at Clarence House, and Windsor Castle.

"I've met prime ministers, royalty, the Queen. That's the great thing about this country. It doesn't matter where you come from, if you succeed or give something back, then there are no barriers."

So explains multi-millionaire businessman Peter Cruddas as we chat in his office, the headquarters of CMC Markets near the Tower of London. It's less than five miles from where he grew up here in Hackney, but a world away.

Now 56, Peter was named the richest man in the City of London by Sunday Times in 2007, with an estimated fortune of £860million.

The father-of-four has homes in Monaco, Antibes, Hertfordshire and Piccadilly and travels between them in his private jet.

A far cry from where he and his twin Stephen and elder brother John grew up on Bracklyn Court Estate before moving to Vince Court when the twins were six, and where John stayed until he left home in his early twenties.

His father, also John, worked at Smithfield meat market and "drank and smoked himself to death", while his mother Lily was the "rock" of the family who supported the three boys.

He left Shoreditch Comprehensive with no qualifications, aged 15, and went to work in the City as a telex operator for Western Union. After being made redundant, he went on to work in the trading rooms of banks including the Bank of Iran and Marine Midland.

“ Hackney is where I come from. If I can give somebody a little bit of hope it's a pleasure ”

He said: "I was just a dogsbody on the telex machines but I picked up trading, worked in banks and learned the ropes."

In 1989 he set up CMC Markets and it was the arrival of the internet in the early 1990s that really saw business explode because it offered everyone the ability to trade on the world's financial markets through his company.

Now he is in a position where his charity, the Peter Cruddas Foundation, has been able to give away £15million in the past two years to 60 organisations including The Duke of Edinburgh's Award, The Prince's Trust, Great Ormond Street Hospital and the Royal Opera House. He aims to give away £100million his lifetime.

"Fifteen million in two years – we've not made a bad start," he quips.

So, given he hardly needs the publicity, why has he found time to speak to Hackney Today, I ask.

He explained: "Hackney is where I came from. This is an hour out of my time – but if I can give somebody a little bit of hope and inspiration it's a pleasure. Someone might be feeling a little bit depressed because their lives aren't moving forward then they see this and think 'this guy did it, he's from round here, he left school at 15, I can do it'. And if it helps one person it's worth it."

He adds: "I was amazed when I went to Hackney, and it's become very trendy. It's really changed and property prices have shot up. But I'm pleased to see Hackney being regenerated and that it's now a very multicultural society.

Everyone lives side by side and it doesn't matter where you come from, what religion or race you are – it's just a fantastic borough and I enjoy going there."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I carved a pumpkin with my children for Halloween. Can this be recycled in my blue bin, and if not, what should I do with it?

A: All food waste, with the exception of raw meat and bones, can be put into your blue bin to be recycled. You can put the pumpkin, along with the scrapings from inside, into your blue bin and put this out on your collection day. Alternatively if you have a compost bin or wormery you can chop up the pumpkin and compost it at home. All food waste collected in the borough is taken to a composting plant in Edmonton, north London, where it is broken down to produce compost. This is brought back to the borough and used on parks and green spaces to improve the local environment and make Hackney a greener place to live.

HUNDREDS of residents keen to live a greener life took part in the second annual Watch Your Waste Week from 19-25 October.

The week aimed to highlight the amount of waste being thrown away, as well as ways to reduce it.

More than 300 people made green pledges at the Recycling Team's plastic bag amnesty stall at Tesco in Morning Lane. In return they were given a reusable bag as well as a 'bag for life'.

Over 100 people attended a Give or Take event at Gayhurst Community School, where more than 1,000 kilos of furniture and bric-a-brac was exchanged for reuse.

In addition, 30 residents took up the Zero Waste challenge to reduce their waste over the week.

The results are already coming in, but residents can still take part in the challenge until 6 November, and be in with a chance to win one of 43 organic food boxes from Growing Communities. Another highlights of the week were free give-aways, including real nappy packs for parents, and over 100 'food rescue packs', which were given to people who took part in an online food waste quiz.

Dr Compost was on hand to give composting and wormery advice to more than 100 people at a free compost give away event.

Residents from Warburton and Darcy estate used the week to get more people on the estate using their new community composter. Installed in August this year, it gives residents the option to divert their food waste, and the compost is used to grow food in the raised planting beds on the estate.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for neighbourhoods, said: "I am pleased that so many residents are supporting our commitment to make Hackney one of the greenest boroughs in London and urge others to join us and keep the momentum going by using our improved services and facilities."

Composting for the big zero

HOXTON'S Follingham Court estate is among six new locations in England taking part in a project aiming to make Britain a 'zero waste nation'.

They will join six existing Zero Waste Places in demonstrating how to reduce waste as far as possible, whether at home, work, school or in the community.

Follingham Court

residents will participate through the installation of a new composting unit, as well as a growing wall where they can plant food. The project will use social networking sites such as Facebook and Twitter to provide tips and support on reducing waste and reducing the carbon footprint.

Environment Secretary Hilary Benn announced the new locations alongside a new Zero Waste Places Standard for local authorities, which will recognise areas that go above and beyond the national waste targets, while supporting them with small grants for further development.

Standing up for the environment

STUDENTS, teachers and volunteers were among those celebrated at an event highlighting the importance of sustainability in schools.

Altogether 19 people were named 'Green Heroes', with each being commended for their contribution to promoting conservation. The awards were organised by The Learning Trust, and took place on 6 October.

Joe Jones, a Year six winner from Jubilee Primary School, N16, was nominated by fellow eco-conscious pupils for his mature and thoughtful approach to greener living.

From Tyssen school, site manager John Hayward was commended for building a pond on the school site that has attracted birds, frogs and other wildlife, as well as creating a living green roof that has cut down energy usage.

Speaking at the event, Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Muttalip Unluer, said: "We need to preserve the environment for future generations and this all starts in the schools. Hopefully we can all help undo the damage done by previous generations and embedding this message at school level is paramount to the conservation of our resources and planet."

The Learning Trust's Sustainable Schools Initiative supports schools in Hackney to become sustainable by 2020.

Green spending

THE Council has received a top rating for 'green' spending from the Mayor of London.

Thanks to its focus on buying recycled and sustainable products across the Council, Hackney received a 'gold' rating in the Mayor of London's Green Procurement Code on 26 October.

New solar powered pay-and-display machines save the Council 72 tonnes of CO2 every year. A new paper supply for printers is 100 per cent recycled, and also avoids use of damaging bleaching agents.

The Council's fleet of vehicles also has green credentials. The number of electric vehicles in service, has increased, while others use sustainably-sourced biodiesel.

Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Customer Services and Sustainability, said: "The Council is committed to maintaining Hackney as the greenest borough in London, by putting the environment at the heart of how we deliver services. There's still a good way to go, and this is a step in the right direction.

The Mayor of London's Green Procurement Code encourages organisations in the capital, including small to medium-sized businesses, to consider environmental impacts when awarding contracts and purchasing supplies. More info at: www.greenprocurementcode.co.uk

Brain food at breakfast

Pupils can tuck in to a healthy breakfast at St John of Jerusalem Primary School, and also take part in sports (below)

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

PUPILS from three primary schools in Hackney can enjoy food and fun every school day, thanks to a breakfast club.

The club is held at St John of Jerusalem Primary School, but also opens its doors to pupils from Orchard and Lauriston primary schools. The club is supported by Sanctuary Housing, The Learning Trust and Let's Get Fit for Sport, a Hackney-based sports education company.

From 8am every school day, between 20 and 30 children are given a healthy breakfast, plus the chance to take part in supervised sports and games before their lessons begin.

Stephanie Killer, Sanctuary's regional director, said: "We wanted to support this breakfast club as it gives parents more options and greater flexibility.

"Not only do they have the reassurance of a safe place for their children, but also the youngsters get the chance to socialise with friends and share a nutritional breakfast in a fun environment."

Follow your Olympic dreams

TWO Olympic medallists inspired Year 9 students at The Bridge Academy to follow their dreams.

David Hemery, gold medallist in the 1968 Mexico Olympics in the 400m hurdles, and Guin Batten, silver medallist in rowing at the Sydney 2000 Olympics, explained how they found a way to overcome obstacles.

During a workshop called 'Be the Best You Can Be' students were taught to focus on the values and qualities that would most help achieve their dreams.

One student said: "Even if people put you down, you can achieve. Guin was told she couldn't row because she was too small, but she did it anyway."

Common themes discussed were self-awareness, persistence and self-belief. The students later put this into practice as they aimed to improve their times on a circuit of sporting activities including rowing, standing jumps and sprints.

The half-day workshop last month was a joint initiative with East London Business Alliance and 21st Century Legacy, the charity set up by David Hemery.

Anne Barton, Interim Principal at The Academy, said: "It was a fantastic opportunity to inspire our students and to get them to think and talk about their dreams."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Top-class GCSE results

SCHOOLS in the borough can take pride in achieving some of the most improved GCSE results nationwide. Data from the Department of Children, Schools and Families found Hackney to have the highest increase in students achieving at least five A* to C grades, including English and Maths, in the country. As students celebrated their results as individuals, the schools saw GCSE results improve 8.8 percentage points compared to 2008. In addition the borough has also improved by 34.5 percentage points since 1998, one of the largest jumps nationwide and second only to Kensington and Chelsea.

Passing education back

SCHOOLS secretary Ed Balls has announced his intention to end his department's formal intervention in the running of education services in Hackney.

He said he was pleased with improvements in Hackney's schools and would end intervention as soon as he was convinced the necessary support to continue the good progress was in place.

Central Government intervened in 2002, when The Learning Trust was set up to improve educational standards in the borough. The Council signed a 10-year contract with the Trust, making it responsible for running all schools, nurseries and play centres.

Key improvements include higher GCSE pass rates, and 90 per cent of the borough's secondary schools graded as good or outstanding by schools inspector Ofsted.

Going strong at 50

HITTING 50 may mean time to slow down for some; but for Cardinal Pole Catholic School it signifies a bumper year of celebrations.

Since its Golden Jubilee festivities began in September, the school has had barbecues, a charity walk and a visit to the burial ground of the school's namesake Cardinal Reginald Pole (1500-1558) at Canterbury Cathedral. Katherine Hartigan, Cardinal Pole's headteacher, said: "The real strength of the school is its welcoming and warm atmosphere where individuals feel valued and have the opportunity to develop spirituality as well as academically".

Cardinal Pole is looking for former pupils and staff to get in touch for upcoming events. For info call: 0208 985 5150 or e-mail: christinethompson@cardinalpole.co.uk

Bogey Wonderland

By Gareth Mason

A MAGICAL trail of fairytales and mythology is currently on view at the Museum of Childhood.

Organised by a 50-strong group of mainly Hackney-based artists hailing from a variety of backgrounds and countries, the free exhibit 'Wonderland' offers imaginative and sometimes sinister perspectives that doesn't fail to stray too far from the moods and themes found in each original story. Cautionary tales and battles between good and evil are discussed alongside surreal and thoughtful pieces drawing upon 'Rapunzel' and 'Little Red Riding Hood'.

While the visual content is unlikely to scare its younger audience too much, the exhibit doesn't shy away from the drama and cruelty that many of these tales deal in to put across their message. That said, it had slipped my mind that the wicked queen in Snow White was forced to dance to her death wearing red-hot iron shoes. Thought-provoking questions are posted about the exhibit to highlight the relevance of the themes though children more motivated by a bit of harmless role-play can stimulate their imaginations more practically with the aid of a costume box.

'Wonderland' runs at the Museum of Childhood until 10 January 2010

PREVIEW

The light fangtastic

By Marcel Reinard

EVERYONE seems loves to a vampire these days – their good looks, difficult sun-to-skin condition; they're nothing but lonely recluses cursed by a world that fails to understand them.

Well actually they're not and a new play at the Barbican plans to puts them right back in their horrifying, bloodthirsty, Christopher-Lee-with-fangs-out shaped box.

'They Only Come at Night: Visions' is the first part of a vampire trilogy by theatre company Slung Low and combines live performance, dance, digital projection, music and, most importantly, atmosphere to recreate the legendary fear of one of our favourites from the undead family.

The play follows a walk-through experience, which will take the audience from the Box Office at the venue to a secret location.

Only three people can see the show at any one time so it seems the team behind the show aim to turn up the frights by turning down the numbers. Slung Low has revealed little except a full three-dimensional experience 'shadows' and 'terrifying consequences'. 'Twilight', eat your heart out.

Safer streets

Young people aged nine-12 from Chatham ward with PCSO Matthew Willsden and Sergeant Louise Gill; and in discussion during a panel meeting

By
Miranda Yates

PANELS of young people from Hackney estates are meeting with Police and Council officers to discuss how to make their neighbourhoods safer.

The youth-led project aims to build trust between the authorities and young people; create a bond between the generations; and give young people a stronger voice to express concerns about safety within their communities.

Police will share up-to-the-minute data on crime figures, and youth crime patterns as well as listening to young people's concerns.

“Young people often notice things that can be invisible to adults”

Police Community Support Officer, Matthew Wilsdon said: “Young people have a unique and important perspective on safety. They spend longer out and about on the streets and often notice things that can be invisible to adults. Many also have strong views on the work the Police should be doing to protect them and their peers from harm.”

The Youth Community Action Panels will mirror adult panels, which already run in every ward, discussing concerns and setting priorities for the Police and Council. An ambassador from the youth panel will attend adult meetings and vice versa.

There are currently youth panels in Haggerston and Chatham wards, but the Council is working with members of Hackney's Youth Parliament and Police Safer Neighbourhood Teams to roll out the initiative across the borough.

In Haggerston, 16 Year Nine students from the Bridge Academy were voted onto the panel by classmates. Police asked students to consider voting for people who combined good communication skills with a streetwise streak.

Shouting for more

By Antonio Akue, 15, Amrita Kaur-Landa, 14 and Ola Adeniran, 13

BRILLIANT performances at the all-singing all-dancing Jack Petchey Awards had the huge audience of young people on their feet shouting for more at the Hackney Empire.

Headliners reporters went along to cover the awards ceremony, organised by the Jack Petchey Foundation, which recognises the achievements of young people involved in youth clubs across London.

The ceremony started with a street dance performance entitled “Glow in the Dark” from a young group called Estate of the Arts. They danced to a number of songs but the main appeal of the performance was a young Michael Jackson impersonator.

After this stunning introduction, the lucky 160 young people were called to the stage one after the other to collect their awards.

We also had a great performance from the wonderful 17 year old singer, Ruth Brown (right). She gave us an amazing performance singing a couple of brilliant songs from the Dream Girls movie. Ruth was an amazing performer, lighting up the stage while singing and her powerful voice was enough to get the audience crazy. The ceremony was a celebration of the achievements of young people. We definitely appreciated this all the way from the compere's bad jokes to the great performances. We think the award winners should be proud of their accomplishments and keep up the hard work.

of toys from the basement of the museum. The hospital's arts curator, Shaun Caton, said: "Hidden Treasures is a photographic journey through the store room cupboards and cabinets beneath the museum – a visual record of some extraordinary objects and items related to the history of childhood."

The exhibition, at the hospital's education centre, consists of 64 colour photos, with subjects ranging from ancient Roman and Syrian grave goods, to dolls and other toys. There are also images of Victorian porcelain feeding bottles and inhalers.

The exhibition will run until end of the year and is open to the public.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Second double 'excellent'

HOMERTON Hospital has received a double 'excellent' rating for the second year running in its annual health check – the only acute hospital in London to retain this rating. The Care Quality Commission awarded an excellent rating to Homerton both for the quality of services it provides to patients and its record of sound financial management.

The health check examines all NHS services across the country and scores them against a number of national targets and standards.

Homerton is one of only a few trusts to receive an 'excellent' rating in both categories – quality of services and financial management. The Trust has scored 'excellent' for use of resources for the past three years.

Nancy Hallett, the Trust's Chief Executive, said: "These are again terrific results, which reflect an outstanding effort from all our staff to improve services for our patients, whilst at the same time, working efficiently and effectively to build up a sound financial base for the future."

"Foundation Trust status now allows us the freedom to use our resources in a way that ensures a direct benefit to our patients. Additionally, we have invested over £10 million into new facilities for IVF treatment and the mother and baby centre, which is soon to open."

Building's historic status

A HACKNEY health centre is celebrating its new Grade II listed status with a public tour of the building.

St Leonard's Health Centre in Kingsland Road received the listing from English Heritage last month.

The free tour, which starts at 7pm on 23 November, will offer visitors the chance to learn about the history and architecture of the building. St Leonard's Hospital grew out of the infirmary at the St Leonard Shoreditch Workhouse. Over the years much work was done to the building, which was even condemned in 1934.

St Leonard's Health Centre is now run by the City & Hackney Teaching Primary Care Trust.

Don't forget about seasonal flu

ELDERLY residents and those with long-term health conditions are being urged to get their free seasonal flu jab.

Everyone aged 65 and over is routinely offered the jab every winter, as are younger people with conditions such as heart disease, diabetes, multiple sclerosis and serious kidney and liver disease.

Every year, there are approximately 8,000 seasonal flu-related deaths in the winter months in England and Wales.

Seasonal flu, also known as influenza, is a highly infectious illness caused by a virus. The virus, which is different from swine flu (H1N1), changes every year, as does the vaccine, so, it is important that those at risk ensure they receive the jab to protect themselves.

The seasonal flu jab does not protect against swine flu. A vaccine is due to be made available later in the winter.

Residents who believe they are eligible for a seasonal flu jab should contact their GP.

Hackney at War

Hackney Archives is pleased to announce the republication of Jennifer Golden's 'Hackney at War'. Originally published to mark the 50th anniversary of the end of the conflict, Hackney at War draws on contemporary newspaper reports, graphic personal recollections and official records to recreate the atmosphere of the time. Also included is a list of bomb incidents affecting the area. Copies available at Hackney Archives very soon.

By Sally England,
Local Studies Librarian

REMEMBRANCE Sunday this year falls on 8 November, with Armistice Day following on Wednesday 11.

Ceremonies will take place to honour those who have lost their lives in the service of their country, with poppy wreaths laid at many of the war memorials found across the borough.

Most war memorials were erected following the First World War of 1914-1918, with the names of Second World War casualties added later. However, while the 1920s was a significant time for the construction of memorials by local councils, less was done to guarantee their good condition in the long term.

The War Memorials (Local Authorities' Powers) Act of 1923 permitted 'local authorities under certain circumstances to maintain, repair and protect war memorials vested in them' but this was not a legal obligation to use public money for their upkeep. Many memorials were placed in churches and other places of worship. While parish councils and the Royal British Legion care for them today, there is no central body or person legally responsible for their upkeep.

Hackney has many different war memorials commemorating both civilians and the armed forces, some of which are found in public places, some in more private locations. Others no longer exist, such as the street memorials that sprang up in the area during the First World War listing names and decorated with flowers and photographs.

One of these was created in Daubeney Road, Clapton, which was dedicated in 1917 and gave the names of all those from the street who were away serving in the armed forces as well as those who had been killed in action. Street memorials seem to have originated in the area through the inspiration of the then Rector of South Hackney, and were given royal approval when Queen Mary viewed one during her visit to the East End in August 1916. Very little else is known about these local memorials, so if you have any information or memories of them please contact Hackney Archives and let us know.

Georgie Burchell, Hackney School Travel Plan (STP) Advisor; Nisha Durgacharan, Transport for London (TfL)'s Acting STP Programme Manager; Alison Butler, Tyssen Sustainable Travel Manager; pupils Latichele and Nathaniel; and Ross Butcher, TfL Regional School Travel Advisor

Gracia Douglas

PUPILS and staff at Tyssen Community School are celebrating an award that names them London's 'school of the year' for their School Travel Plan.

The primary in Upper Clapton was awarded platinum status at Transport for London (TfL)'s Accreditation scheme awards ceremony on 20 October.

The TfL accreditation scheme has been designed to encourage long-term commitment to sustainable travel planning in schools.

Tyssen introduced its plan in 2006 and has now achieved a nine per cent increase in the number of pupils cycling to school and using public transport. It has also seen a massive 20 per cent reduction in the number of pupils being driven to school.

Bike ownership has increased among pupils, and the number of parents and staff driving a car

“This win is down to the hard work of all the pupils, parents and staff”

with one person in it has decreased by nine per cent.

Alison Butler, Tyssen's Sustainable Travel Manager, along with two pupils, collected the winning plaque and a certificate. She said: "This is a fantastic win, which is down to the hard work of all the pupils, parents and staff at the school. The headteacher understands the benefits of a well developed travel plan and has taken an important and innovative step by investing in a continuous programme of cycle training at the school."

Our Lady and St Joseph's School also received Accreditation status, achieving 'Higher Standards' level (silver).

The Council's Streetscene department works with primary schools to develop travel plans, which set out practical ways to reduce the number of car trips made to and from school, to encourage more walking and cycling and to improve safety on the school journey.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Utility companies now need a permit to dig Hackney roads

Taking control of roadworks

UTILITY companies now need a permit before digging up Hackney's roads after the Government approved a new permit scheme.

The scheme will help reduce congestion and smooth traffic flow in the borough, as it will allow Transport for London and the Council to impose conditions and timing over utility works.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This scheme has the potential to make a big difference to Hackney's road users. It will hopefully cut the inconveniences caused by badly timed road works and allow the Council to set conditions for companies to help minimise disruption."

Bus route view

RESIDENTS are being asked for their views on proposals by Transport for London (TfL) to extend the 488 bus route from Clapton to Dalston.

The extended route would provide a much-needed link for residents going to Homerton Hospital, the Petchey Academy and Bsix Sixth Form College, as well as to London Overground services.

The full route extension would lead from Clapton, Kenninghall Roundabout along Kenninghall Road, Rendlesham Road, Downs Road, Rectory Road, Shacklewell Lane and Kingsland High Street finishing at Dalston Junction Station.

The deadline is 20 November 2009. To have your say visit: www.tfl.gov.uk and type bus route 488 into search.

Our new line is on the way

HACKNEY'S new Overground line has moved a step closer.

The first passenger train was tested last month on the £1billion track, which Transport for London (TfL) is building from Dalston to West Croydon and Crystal Palace.

The test train ran at 10mph from New Cross Gate to Dalston Junction and back to check all the newly built sections of the line. All the tests were successful and further tests up to a top speed of 45mph will now be carried out.

TfL rail boss Ian Brown said: "This was an important day for the East London Line project. All the track, stations and signals are there and the line is ready for intensive testing and fitting out. The test train is now running and checking the route from end-to-end."

The testing comes as construction nears completion at Dalston Junction, as well as Shoreditch High Street, Haggerston and Hoxton. Workers at all four stations are now preparing to finish the wiring and install information systems and signs. The line is due to be finished in 2010.

The new East London Line train passing through Dalston Junction during its 10mph test last month

Hackney is a fast improving Council, serving one of the UK's most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The Olympics are coming...

Job vacancies

Community Services

Senior Adult Placement Officer, Mental Health Service

£32,532 - £35,055

Closing date: 11 November

You will bring proven skills and leadership qualities to supervising and supporting team members in the delivery of a unique service.

You will have experience of providing management support for small teams of staff, including work plans, supervision, appraisals, staff development and code of conduct guidance.

Your responsibilities will include overseeing the application process for potential carers, as well as analysing and making recommendations on complex cases. You will also ensure that local authority performance and practice standards are monitored and maintained. A qualified Mental Health Nurse, Social Worker or similar, you will have an understanding of the legal and statutory framework for social and mental health care.

Children & Young People's Service

Administrator

£25,515 - £27,009 pro-rata

Closing date: 22 November

Part time: 22 hours per week

You'll work as part of a dynamic team to ensure high-quality administrative services are delivered to operational staff. You'll deal with sensitive and confidential information so a professional and discrete approach is required. You'll be able to demonstrate a sound knowledge and experience of working in an administration role, and be comfortable working in a fast-paced environment. Knowledge of MS Office is essential, and you'll need to be able to prioritise your workload and remain calm under pressure.

An excellent standard of written English and attention to detail are vital. You will be the first point of contact, so a clear communication style and the ability to work effectively with staff from different agencies are paramount. A positive and flexible approach and dedication to the work of the department is also important.

We provide a range of training and development opportunities to all our staff and take your professional development needs seriously.

Unit Co-ordinator

£25,515 - £27,009

Closing date: 15 November

We have created small units that rely on this essential role to help lead Social Workers back into doing social work. We need enthusiastic, pro-active people to provide the organisational foundation of the units.

You will often be the first point of contact with families, so an understanding and awareness of the importance of the work the unit is crucial. The role is varied and you'll manage a range of tasks at any one time – from organising a meeting with a family to updating a social workers diary, and from liaising with colleagues in partner organisations to accurately recording confidential information.

Your tact and diplomacy are vital, as is a genuine interest in responding to the needs of children and families.

Social Worker

£30,345 - £37,851

Closing date: 15 November

Join and help us become the leading social work service for children and families in the country. Our aim is to reduce the number of children in care by providing intensive and high quality therapeutic and practical support for families. We have several units up and running and are now recruiting skilled Social Workers, who are committed to an evidence-based approach and are excited about the impact we can have with the children and families we work with in Hackney. Social work is a complex task. Over the years we believe that this has been largely forgotten. Social Workers need good support from the organisation they work for, freedom to practise at a high level and a range of intellectual abilities and emotional resilience to bring to the task.

In short, Social Workers need to be highly professional. We understand the importance of offering development opportunities and appropriate support and remuneration, and we plan to equip people with the skills needed to be excellent Social Workers.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

BEFORE joining the Hoxton Apprentice, Patrick Jarrett, 49, had made his name as a top DJ. However, following crisis and tragedy in his personal life, by his mid-forties Patrick was not only out of work, but also homeless. Dedicated to his family and used to being the provider, Patrick realised he needed a career that would allow him the creative flexibility he thrived on, but also provide a reliable income.

Patrick has always had a passion for cooking. His brother owned a Caribbean restaurant and he had occasionally helped out in the kitchen. Hearing about an opening on Hoxton's Healthy Living Programme, he joined up for the six-week training course. A natural leader and brilliant peer mentor, Patrick's creativity was soon very evident in the kitchen. When the programme ended he applied for a full Hoxton Apprenticeship and looks forward to gaining industry qualifications. "Eventually", said the former DJ, "I might even open my own restaurant."

Green say

RESIDENTS' views are being sought on plans to improve Mabley Green in Homerton.

Following discussions with residents and the Mabley Green User Group, the Council has created draft proposals to improve the green.

Residents, park users and interested groups have until 31 December to make their comments.

The new design has been commissioned by the Council, in partnership with Design for London, with the funding secured for a second artificial turf pitch, new changing rooms and an outdoor gym. Other elements of the design are proposals at this stage and will depend on the Council securing additional funding.

Creating a final design for the Green will make these funding applications more likely to succeed.

Drinking views

THE Council is considering introducing a borough-wide campaign to tackle alcohol related anti-social behaviour, and wants to hear the views of residents and businesses.

The borough-wide Controlled Drinking Area (CDA) would give police the powers to confiscate alcohol or issue fixed penalty fines to those drinking and causing disorder, or displaying threatening behaviour in streets, parks and open spaces. This does not make it illegal to drink alcohol responsibly in a public place but aims to reduce anti-social behaviour.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Hackney Council is committed to improving services and increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

CLEANING UP THE STREETS

Andrew Dove, monitoring officer, waste strategy

Andrew Dove, 47, has been working with the Neighbourhoods and Regeneration team in Hackney for a year but has spent almost two decades getting people to think more about waste and recycling. Before his current role as a monitoring officer, he worked for Islington Council as both an environment and a recycling officer. Now based in Mare Street, he says: "Most of my day is spent around the streets of Hackney wherever I'm needed most."

As one of a team of three working under a senior monitoring officer, his work takes him all over the borough to keep tabs on the state of the local streets. "Each of us is assigned a ward where we assess potential or recurring problems. "In my work we regularly meet face to face with the public and it makes me feel optimistic that most people are very positive about the challenges of taking better care of our environment."

Waste not, want not

By Gareth Mason

THERE'S literally a lot of ground to cover when working in the waste monitoring team.

The team checks the borough's seven-and-a-half square miles in search of 'waste anti-social behaviour' to ensure Hackney streets are kept clean for residents and visitors alike.

Perennial problems such as fly-tipping cause more than an eyesore, they can seriously damage the health and safety of an environment. In addition, these illegal dumping grounds may encourage other people to place their own waste in these 'pop-up rubbish tips'.

While they're not actually collecting rubbish themselves, around 70 per cent of the monitoring team's working day is spent making sure such problems don't occur. The Part of the waste monitoring team's role is to check recycling areas are fit for use team also checks recycling areas are in a fit and undamaged state for residents and collectors to use.

If problems do arise, information is shared with recycling and street cleaning officers to deal with the issue. This can range from cleaning up to,

in some cases, putting in measures to tackle the perpetrators.

KEY FACT

There are more than 1,000 public bins in Hackney and over £1 billion is spent annually keeping the streets clean

LONDON BOROUGH OF HACKNEY THE HACKNEY (PARKING PLACES) (AMENDMENT) (NO. 4) EXPERIMENTAL ORDER 2009 TRO 580

1. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Council of the London Borough of Hackney on 30th October 2009 made the above-mentioned Order under sections 9 and 10 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 as amended by the Local Government Act 1985 and the Traffic Management Act 2004.
2. The general effect of the Order in relation to the Council's experimental "Health and Social Care" parking permit and voucher scheme, within the Council's "D" controlled parking zone will be to update the new "D" Zone parking place traffic order with the details of the scheme:-
  - (a) the permit will allow the holder to park in pay and display and shared use parking places within the Borough's Controlled Parking Zones for a maximum period of 3 hours. The charges for the permit are set out in the Schedule to this notice;
  - (b) the vouchers will cost £24 for a pack of 10 and will allow the holder to park in pay and display and shared use parking places within the Borough's Controlled Parking Zones for a maximum period of 3 hours.
  - (c) the criteria for the issue of the permit and vouchers are as follows: any potential applicant:-

- (i) would need to prove that they spend 30% or more of their working time in the community each week;
  - (ii) would need to prove that their work relates to medical or social care in the community;
  - (iii) would be an employee of a specified medical or social care institution or service based within the Borough;
  - (iv) during the course of the applicant's employment, the applicant will require the use of a motor vehicle for more than 12 hours during each week;
  - (v) in cases of uncertainty, would be required to present such further evidence as required by the London Borough of Hackney in order to make a judgment in respect of the application
3. Where it appears necessary for certain purposes, the London Borough of Hackney or any person authorised by them may modify or suspend the Order or any provisions in it, while the Order is in force.
  4. In due course, the London Borough of Hackney will be considering whether or not the provisions of the Order should be continued in force indefinitely. Within the period of six months from the coming into force of the Order, or if the Order is subsequently varied by another Order or modified, from the coming into force of that variation or modification (whichever is the latest), any person may object to the making of an Order to continue indefinitely those provisions. Any such objection should be made in writing, giving the grounds on which it is made to the address contained in paragraph 6 of this notice.
  5. Copies of the Order, which comes into force on 11th November 2009 and may remain in force for up to 18 months, other relevant Orders and of other documents giving more detailed particulars of the Order, can be inspected during normal office hours on Mondays to Fridays inclusive, during the period within which objection can be made in accordance with paragraph 5 above, in the reception area, London Borough of Hackney, 263 Mare Street, London, E8 3HT. Further information may be obtained by contacting Helpdesk on 020 8356 2897.
  6. If any person wishes to question the validity of the Order, or of any provision contained therein on the grounds that it not within the powers conferred by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 or that any requirement of the Act or of any instrument under the Act has not been complied with, that person may, within six weeks of the date on which the Order is made, apply for the purpose to the High Court.
